CARTER ASKS RETURN TO SIMPLER INAUGURAL

By Peter Gregson

WASHINGTON
Reuter--After taking the oath of office in 1961, President John Kennedy led 32,000 marchers in an inaugural parade that braved snow-covered streets and icy winds that reduced temperatures to 10 degrees below zero. His successor, Lyndon Johnson, delivered his 22-minute inaugural address from behind a screen of bullet-proof glass.

The last inauguration of a U. S. president, in 1973 when Richard Nixon was sworn in for his second term, cost more than $4 million.

For his inauguration on January 20, President-elect Jimmy Carter wants a return to the less grandiose times of early U. S. presidents.

The name most frequently mentioned when Carter staff discuss inauguration plans is that of Thomas Jefferson, America's third president.

When he was sworn in for the first time on March 4, 1801, the first president to take the oath of office in Washington, D.C., President Jefferson walked the one block from his rooms at Mrs. Conrad's boarding house to the capitol building.

After his second inauguration ceremony four years later, he threw open parts of the White House to the general public--which resulted in considerable damage to the grounds and furnishings and fittings in the East Room from the huge crowd.

Mr. Carter wants his term of office to be more democratic with a small "d", a favorite phrase among Carter staffers, than previous presidencies and this is being emphasized in the inauguration ceremonies.

The president-elect plans to wear a morning suit for the ceremony, but not a top hat, and will stop by at each of the six official inaugural parties being held around town.

Party-goers will have to dig into their pockets if they want a celebratory drink, however, as cash bars only will be in place at each event--one of the ways to keep costs down.

The inaugural committee coordinating the arrangements has been ordered by Mr. Carter not to exceed the amount spent on the inauguration by any previous president.

Mr. Nixon's four million dollars in 1973 was the highest total, but even spending that much money, a spokesman said, would not represent anything like the same amount as it did four years ago because of inflation.

A total of 300,000 invitations has been mailed to the inaugural events, which include the inauguration day parties, the parade and other receptions covering a five-day period from January 18 to 22.

Receiving a coveted invitation, however, has a string attached--an acceptance cost $25. This price is far less than some of the more prized tickets in previous years, but a greater number of people have been invited than before.

"Never before have so many people had such a chance to take part in the inauguration of a president," said Bardyle Tirana, one of the joint heads of the inaugural committee. "This will be a true people's inaugural, the kind Governor Carter wants."

In 1973, 38,000 invitations were issued for such things as a White House reception or a reserved box along the parade--the cost of the latter running into hundreds of dollars.

The vast number of complimentary tickets that marked previous inaugurations has been done away with. This time, even Congressmen, cabinet members, and supreme court justices will have to pay the $25.

That aside, acceptances are pouring in "like an avalanche," in the words of one inaugural committee staffer, and anyone who wants a hotel room in Washington around January 20 will look in vain.

One special group of 350 guests will be aboard a train, appropriately called the Peanut Special, coming from Mr. Carter's home town of Plains, Georgia--more than half the population of the small farming community.

And if any of them or the by-then president gets a bit homesick amid the glitter of the inaugural balls on January 20, they'll be able to enjoy themselves country-style the next day at what is being billed as the world's biggest square dance.

Student Clubs Supervisor

GATESVILLE

A youth activities supervisor at the Gatesville State School was reported in satisfactory condition at midweek at Coryell Memorial Hospital, where he is being treated for head and ear wounds sustained when he was clubbed by a young student at the reform school on Sunday. The student used a wooden arm from a chair in the attack.

Contract Due For Hospital

GEORGETOWN

The Georgetown Hospital Authority expects to sign a $2,425,000 contract for construction of a new hospital by the end of the week, with a groundbreaking to follow later this month and completion expected within two years. The hospital fund drive chairman was named "Man of the Year" by the Chamber of Commerce for his efforts in the successful fund drive.

First Baby Awaited

ROCKDALE

The first baby of 1977 has yet to make the scene in Rockdale and claim a big variety of prizes from local business firms. Rules provide that the baby must be born in Rockdale, parents must live in the Rockdale-Lexington-Milano area or local trade territory.

Death May Be Vaccine Linked

WACO

A direct correlation may exist between the disease which killed a Mount Calm woman Nov. 21 and the swine flu shot which she received 24 days prior to her death, according to a report by the Armed Forces Institute in Washington. Mrs. Tommy Lillard, 27, died Nov. 21 in a Waco hospital. Material from a postmortem examination on Mrs. Lillard is being studied.

Marshal Asks For Time

ROSEBUD

Rosebud city council received a letter from the proposed new marshal, Maurice Lowrey of Cameron, asking that the job which he was supposed to start in January be held open for him for ten weeks while he recuperates from heart surgery. The council will make a decision on the matter at a Tuesday meeting.

Business Barometers Climb

MCGREGOR

While all business barometers moved higher in McGregor during 1976, the most spectacular move was a 11.9 percent jump in city sales tax, the most direct mirror of retail business activity. The City of McGregor received $59,010 in sales tax rebates during 1975, and the amount spurted to $66,035 for 1976. This amount effects one percent of all retail sales.

READY FOR CONCERT--This bass section of the Yoe High Band readies for a special concert to be given Thursday in the high school gym, which will feature film of the band winning in a

Vaccine Link To Rare Disease Eyed

Public health officials investigating the relationship between swine flu inoculation and a fairly rare disease face problems because no one knows much about the disease itself, the Texas Medical Association says.

The biggest mystery is the cause of the Guillain-Barre syndrome, a paralytic disease. This syndrome, which seldom is fatal, has occurred after people have had colds, flu, measles, and about 40 other diseases, one report shows. Yet the same 1966 study says about one third of the cases analyzed had not been sick before they got the syndrome.

Ever since scientists first described the disease more than 115 years ago, people have been trying to pinpoint the cause. Fairly popular ideas blame viruses or certain allergies but these are just a few of the theories.

The disease strikes all ages and both sexes indiscriminately and may be increasing. A 1963 Ohio study shows.

Symptoms vary but generally there is a tingling in the hands or feet, or both. There may be weakness, muscle pain, paralysis of some body parts, breathing problems, difficulty in swallowing, and other symptoms.

Hospitalization often is needed during the worst part of the disease but most victims recover. Doctors can give supportive treatment but there is no known cure for the disease itself. Recovery generally ranges from three weeks to two months. A small number die (2-5 percent) or never fully recover (about 10 percent). Only isolated statistics have been kept but one researcher estimates that there are 10-20 cases per million people. This would mean 120-240 cases every year in Texas.

Cotton Men Vote Yes To Referendum

Producers of upland cotton have voted in favor of amending the cotton research and promotion order to provide for a supplemental assessment on each bale of cotton they market, the U. S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) announced.

A preliminary count of returns on a mail referendum which ended Dec. 17 shows that 67.1 percent of the producers voting favored the proposed amendment, with 35,042 in favor and 17,147 voting against the proposal.

Approval by two-thirds of the producers voting, or by a majority accounting for two-thirds of the cotton represented in the referendum, was necessary for the amendment to become effective.

Effective date for the amendment will be determined after the referendum results are officially tabulated and announced--a process which will take about two weeks, according to officials of USDA's agricultural marketing service.

The preliminary results of the referendum for the state of Texas was 26,120 voted: Yes--17,365. No--8,755. 66.5% voting yes.

Band Concert To Feature March Film

The first annual "Meet the Band" concert is scheduled in the Yoe High gym for Thursday, Jan. 13 at 7 p.m.

Band director Jerry Bartley said, "We are giving this concert for the public as a thank you for their support throughout the football season and school year."

Bartley said the concert will include familiar tunes heard at the pep rallies as well as the football games. Also featured will be the Yoe High twirlers along with the percussion and bass sections, performing throughout the regular program.

Record and 8-track tape orders will be taken at the concert which will be souvenirs of the more familiar tunes played that evening. Added attractions will be the first public showing of the band marching at the recent UIL marching contest held at Waco in November at which the band received a first division rating. A door prize will also be given during the concert.

Tickets for the concert will sell for 50 cents for students through the eighth grade, and $1 for anyone in high school or older. Proceeds from the ticket sales and the record/tape orders will go toward financing the band to Lake Charles, La., next spring to compete in a band festival.

Tickets may be purchased from any high school band student and will be sold at the door.

Investigation Continues In School Fire

State and county officials are continuing their investigation into three fires set at Yoe High School last Monday night, and Fire Chief Felix Matula said calls are coming in from persons who suspect various individuals of starting the fires.

Matula said the State Fire Marshal's Association is working with the Texas Department of Public Safety on the investigation and examination of evidence found at the site. No report has come in yet to the local fire department, the chief said.

A $500 reward has been offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the suspected arsonist.

The fires did little damage to the classroom and floor where they were discovered by a Yoe High student Monday night.

Manpower Fund Approved For 7-County Area

Milam County Judge O. B. Harden has announced that funds for the Central Texas Manpower Consortium Title VI grant under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act have been approved by the U. S. Department of Labor in the amount of $326,424.

These monies will be spent in the seven county area which includes Milam, Bell, Coryell, Hamilton, Lampasas, Mills, and San Saba.

The funds will be used to assist disadvantaged long-term unemployed persons to locate permanent employment by providing work experience and training opportunities.

Additional information can be obtained at the Bell County Manpower office located at 112 East Central, Belton, or by calling 939-1837. The San Saba Manpower office can also be contacted at 319 E. Wallace or by calling 915-372-5149.

McIntosh Named Probation Officer

A Broader Base...

We note a number of older Cen-Tex community leaders are receiving honorary doctorates.

It is commendable that civic leadership is being identified by the education community with intellectual contributions as well.

Intelligence, other than accumulating wealth or power, has not always been as important a factor in the power structure of the Cen-Tex region.

It is the natural order of things for real leadership to find recognition in the education community, which is an integral part of a developing region.

The American way of education has always been a practical application of knowledge and intelligence. But not all the work of higher education can find practical use.

The Central Texas area has UT--Austin, Baylor and TAMU, three junior colleges, at least three other four-year colleges which attract tens of thousands of students.

The value of these institutions to the civic and economic growth is at least as great as any element of the Cen-Tex area, financial, industrial, commercial, professional, or governmental.

Young leaders are updating traditions of the established community, adding the dimension of space-age attitudes and the scope of the broad-based, educated man.

A Little Less 'Talky, Talk'...

Since "talky, talky, talk" is not as cheap as it used to be, over long-distance telephone, at least, inquiries for information have already sharply dropped.

So says Southwestern Bell in Houston at the start of charges after January 7. Information calls dropped 42 percent even before the charge system went in, which begins after the 10th call.

In most smaller exchange-es, like Cameron, Hearne, Rockdale, and Marlin, phone bills are actually less. The increase allowed by Texas Utility Commission, now under appeal by Southwestern Bell, is in intra-state long distance, pay phone calls (to 20¢) and information charges.

This says the public and private sectors will use the telephone more wisely, not quite as whimsically.

Oceans: Our Continuing Frontier

16. FROM WORK TO SPORT

By Heywood Hale Brown

Editor's Note: This is the last of 16 articles in the series "Oceans: Our Continuing Frontier." In this final article of the series, Heywood Hale Brown, journalist and radio and TV personality, discusses the challenge of the sea to those who turn to it for sport and recreation. These articles, which have explored the whole range of human involvement with the sea, were written for Courses by Newspaper, a program developed by University Extension, University of California, San Diego, and funded by a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities.

Copyright 1976 by the Regents of the University of California.

The dolphin, sacred to Poseidon, the pettish, bad-tempered sea god, is symbolic of a calm and friendly sea, and when we see him sporting gaily on the glinting surface of Poseidon's realm, we are reminded that the wide, wet roads of the seven seas are more than aquatic alleys of commerce. They are also paths of pleasure.

Who invented swimming? Who was the first of us to return to the element from which we sprang? Whatever ancient man it was who first cried, "Hey, Og, c'mon in. The water's fine," certainly felt a special pleasure. The blood chemist Leo Vroman said, "We sealed the seawater dragged out of the sea inside us, and have soaked our cells ever since in a world like the one we left millions of years ago."

Such being the case, we can be sure that Og dropped his club and splay-footed down the beach as fast as he could. We can be sure that he and his pioneer friend, being as much Homo Competens as their descendants, had, before the day ended, set up a race course, perhaps from a reef to the protruding bones of a dipodomys which forgot to keep track of the tides.

SWIMMING THE CHANNEL

Despite the fact that ocean swimming is perhaps one of the least complicated and most unforgettably successful of the sensual pleasures, man the moody puritan seems determined to take it at its worst. Hence the steady flow of English Channel swimmers, plunging into the cold, grey, choppy water while as heavily greased as the flagpole at an old-time Fourth of July picnic.

J. B. Johnson was the first of these, making the attempt in 1872. Being, apparently, a sensible man, he remained in the water only 65 minutes, and it was left to Captain Webb three years later to manage the twenty odd miles by remaining in the gelid brine for almost twenty-two hours.

Progress, if the refinement of masochism can be so described, has since been rapid, and it is now a commonplace for the Channel swimmer to emerge at Calais only long enough for a handshake, a cup of hot broth and a fresh dressing of lard before plunging back for the return trip to Dover. Recently the Victoria Sporting Club of London presented a medal to a young American, Jack Robertson, who came within a half mile of swimming the Channel though paralyzed from the waist down.

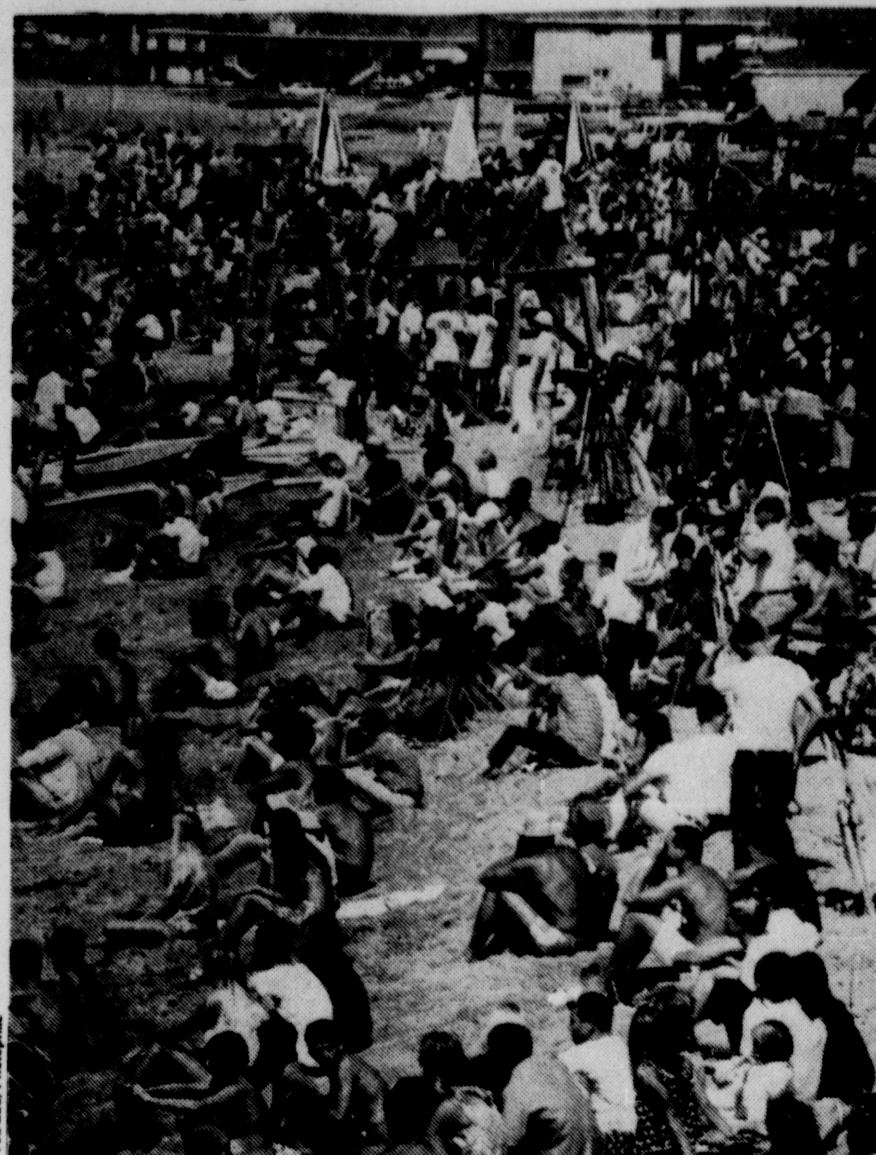

A special medal could seem to be due those who plunge into the tainted and encrusted waters of the brackish Hudson River in attempts to circumnavigate Manhattan Island. Og and his friend may have lacked the daintiness trumpeted by deodorant commercials, but even their low foreheads would have risen at the sight of the fearful bouillabaisse which faces any swimmer who enters the water within reach of our urban sprawl.

Indeed even Thor Heyerdahl, whose adventurous crossing of the Atlantic on a bundle of reeds is so romantic as to move out of the realm of science, in which he classed himself, into the Quixotic world of those adventurers who have, like the Three Wise Men of Gotham, gone to sea in daringly unsuitable craft, discovered that the paper cup and the orange peel are harder to sink than such gallant vessels as the Hesperus and the Golden Hind.

If Leander, plunging into the Hellespont to swim to his beloved Hero, had encountered a Sargasso fleet of saturated cardboard boxes, he might have chosen to wait for the ferry. Still, then the lovers might have lived into a quarrelsome middle age instead of dying at the peak of their passions.

I don't know what Leander went through battling the fast-flowing strait, but swimming coaches have told me that this one-time romp through our old element has become the most painful of all competitive sports, requiring the practitioner to pass voluntarily through a pain barrier in which the lungs seem literally to be on fire, ending at last in a trance-like state where a kind of delirium of exhaustion keeps the body from knowing what violence has been done it.

Perhaps Og and his friend would have done better to stay up in the shelter of the giant fern looking for small amphibians of manageable size and reasonable taste. Still, for every competitive swimmer there are a thousand small boys enjoying the simple challenge of inshore waves, and a thousand old folk gently dipping themselves in the salty fluid which a variety of folk medicines prescribe.

THE LURE OF SURF, SAND AND SUN Environmentalists are concerned with preserving the seashore for recreation in face of population pressures and demands for alternative uses of the ocean.

SINGLE-HANDERS

Less pain-ridden but closer to the danger of shipwreck and death are the sportsmen who dare the wrath of Poseidon with a little canvas, some scraps of wood, and bits and pieces of the knowledge that brought the wily Odysseus home across the wine-dark sea. Some of them are brisk, no-nonsense people who do not realize how different they are from those who live lives of safe and deadening order.

Captain Joshua Slocum forthrightly called his book "Sailing Alone Around the World." No poetry for him, no "All I ask is a tall ship and a star to steer her by."

He steered by an old alarm clock which he used as a chronometer and as to the great moment of departure in the rebuilt derelict Spray, he remarked like a man setting out on a trip to the grocery, "I had resolved on a voyage around the world, and as the wind on the morning of April 24, 1895, was fair, at noon I weighed anchor, set sail, and filled away from Boston."

Weston Martyr, whose "The L200 Millionaire" recounts a wandering life afloat, was almost Dickensian in his appreciation of the alternation of privation and comfort. "Sail all day in the wet and cold, then bring up in some quiet harbour and go below and toast your feet before the galley fire and you'll realize what bliss means. Travel in the steam-heated Pullman and then put up at the Ritz and see if you find any bliss there!"

Antithetically, Tom Follet, who crossed the ocean in what looked like two loosely-linked bananas to finish third in the 172 Single-Handed Transatlantic Race, had no slogan. "Certainly not 'because it's there.' I like heated rooms and feather beds, clothes of silk and shoes of fancy leather. . . I do not like the North Atlantic Ocean. You figure it out."

Figuring out the sports that draw us back to the place where our rubbery ancestors lived is beyond a man who swims badly and can't sail, but Poseidon might say that the swimmer fighting a current, the sailor battling a storm, or the small boy protecting his sand castle with a desperate sand pail dam are all aware that they are essentially alone against a fascinatingly unpredictable enemy who can be, when sun, wind, and surf are right, a fascinating friend.

BACKED INTO a corner in the East Room of the White House, President Andrew Jackson accepts congratulations from an unruly mob of well-wishers at the reception following his inauguration. The crowd was diverted by free tubs of punch. "Old Hickory" managed to escape and spent the night at a nearby hotel. Other similar snafus have enlivened many inaugural balls, galas, and parties in the Nation's Capital.

19th Century Inaugural Left The Capital Reeling

The nation's capital is bracing itself for the biggest inaugural bash since Andrew Jackson's time.

A spokesman for President-elect Jimmy Carter has announced that at least 300,000 to 400,000 partygoers will receive invitations for the event and that everyone in the country will be welcome.

No matter how many show up, it will be hard to match the madcap shenanigans surrounding Jackson's inaugural in 1829. The enthusiastic followers of the veteran Indian fighter and hero of the Battle of New Orleans poured into Washington from near and far to see the "People's President" installed in the highest office of the land, the National Geographic Society says.

Slept in Streets

Frontiersmen, clerks, and bankers, some with wives and children, jammed the boarding houses and hotels, slept in the streets, and whopped it up in the bars. "It was like the inundation of the northern barbarians into Rome," said one eyewitness.

After applauding Jackson's Inaugural Address at the Capitol, some of the crowd surged into a reception at the White House to the sound of crashing china and glassware. Many stood on satin upholstered chairs to catch a glimpse of their hero. One spectator called the scene "a regular Saturnalia."

The throng backed Jackson against a wall in the East Room. Alarmed attendants finally lured well-wishers outside with tubs of punch placed on the lawn.

Jackson's reception wasn't the first or last inaugural event to be marked by an unruly crowd. President James Madison's 1809 inaugural ball—the first held in the nation's capital—set a precedent in fliggle and confusion. People jammed into a Capitol Hill hotel in such numbers that windows were knocked out for fresh air.

The two dances that climaxed James K. Polk's rainy inaugural day in 1845 were designed to assure model decorum. One was priced at $10-a-ticket for high society and the other at $5 for rank and file.

Mixed with Masses

Through an oversight, the diplomatic corps was not invited to the more expensive ball so it went en masse to the other. The result, according to a contemporary account, was the most curious melange, "since the time of the Ark." The wife of one diplomat found herself dancing in the same quadrille with her gardener.

Although the nation was troubled by the Civil War, Abraham Lincoln's second inaugural gala got out of hand. Hundreds stampeded the banquet hall, fighting for places at the refreshment table. Other unruly guests cut souvenirs from brocade window draperies and delicate lace curtains.

In sharp contrast, Rutherford B. Hayes had perhaps the quietest Washington inaugural of them all. He was sworn into office during a private dinner party given by outgoing President Ulysses S. Grant.

Hayes had lost the popular vote but won the election by a single electoral vote. In view of the controversy that developed, and the fact that Inauguration Day in 1877 fell on a Sunday, it was arranged for the oath to be administered quickly and privately. Not even the dinner guests knew what was happening.

THE TEXAS ARMY charges the camera in a re-creation of the Battle of San Jacinto for the "Texas" series of historical films. The two cannons are faithful reproductions of the famed Twin Sisters which helped to win what historians consider to be one of the most significant battles in Western history. The films are on loan free to schools, civic groups, and other organizations in Texas.

History Film Depicts Texas

HOUSTON "Texas," the highly acclaimed four-part documentary of Texas history produced for television three years ago, has now been seen by more than 100,000 students through film loans underwritten by Armco Steel Corporation, one of the sponsors of the original broadcasts.

"Since its first appearance on TV, there has been a constant demand for use of the film," said George Hansen, Armco's top man in Houston. "Collectively, the four films in the series have been viewed by nearly half a million Texans - not including the original TV viewing audiences."

In addition to student use, the Texas series has been borrowed by such diverse groups as newspaper staffs, camera clubs, fire stations, churches, military units, the VFW, and civic clubs.

Hansen said the number of film copies available for loan has been increased to keep up with the demand.

The four successive segments relive Texas history from the dawn of prehistoric civilizations through the discovery of oil at Spindletop in the early part of this century. The series was filmed on location around the state to take advantage of scenery and historical sites. Early events are brought to life through special camera techniques with old paintings and drawings. Some events, such as the Battle of San Jacinto, were recreated in vivid detail with live actors.

Produced, written, and narrated by Houston TV newsman Ron Stone, the series reflects warmth and understanding in its attempt to separate fact from legend.

The films, each of which is 50 minutes long to fit an hour program format, are available at no charge to schools and other interested groups by writing Association Films, 8615 Directors Row, Dallas, TX 75247.

Female Cagers Round-up Mustangs 26-10

The Yoe high girls junior varsity and varsity met the Manor Mustangs in Yoe gym Tuesday night with the JV winning their bout 26-10 while the varsity girls dropped their game 40-36.

The JV girls opened the action. In the first period of play it seemed that the teams were fairly matched as neither team held a convincing lead and at the end of the first period the Yoe girls held a two point edge, 8-6.

A two-point lead was not enough for the Yoemen as they opened up the scoring in the second period, scoring 13 points to jump ahead of the Mustangs, 21-12 as the half ended.

The Yoe defense tightened in the third period, holding the Mustangs to only four points for the period while the Yoe offense tallied 13 points for the quarter and led the game, 34-16. The Mustangs were never able to retaliate, scoring only 5 points in the final stanza as the Yoemen tacked on 6 more and won the game, 40-21.

As the final buzzer sounded the Yoemen owned the courts 66-48. The Yoemen are now 1-1 in district action. High-point man for the Yoemen was Curtis Wise as he tallied 2 points for the winning effort. Next in line was Erroll Spells with 14 points and Millard Daniels with 14 points.

The Yoemen hit 16 of 22 free throws in the winning effort. Leading the JV scoring was Vicki Brashear with 26 points followed by Judith Moore with 10. In other girls action the Yoe girls' varsity also met the Mustangs, dropping their game 36-40. Aside from a tie game, at the end of the first quarter the Yoe girls led the ball game throughout the night.

The score was tied up at the end of the first period of action, 12-12, and never opened up all night. The ball game proved to be a neck-and-neck battle all the way as the half ended with the Yoe girls holding a slight 1 point margin, 22-21.

The third period also proved to be nip-and-tuck as the girls evened the pace and were again able to hold a one-point margin, 32-31. The fourth period proved to be the heartbreaker for the Yoemen as they led the quarter until the final minutes when the Mustangs came on strong with their scoring attack, jumping ahead of the Yoemen and holding the edge, going on to defeat the Yoemen, 40-36.

Leading the scoring for the varsity was Tallulah Green with 16 points, followed by Evelyn Pittman with 12 and Pam Kimbrel with 8.

DIANA CHUBB, #11, moves down the court against a Manor defender.

er. Yoe girls dropped the game 40-36.

CURTIS WISE, #22, jumps high for 2 points. Wise led the Yoe winning effort against Manor with 20 points to his credit.

DURING TIME OUT, Varsity Coach Kenneth Poole instructs the Yoemen on their game strategy.

Farmers Union Raps State Leaders' Inaction

In a time of plunging farm prices and increasing cost of production, issues of agricultural policy in this new year will undoubtedly come to critical turning points.

With a new administration in Washington and a new farm bill slated for draft to replace the expiring 1973 act, agricultural policymaking is top priority among those collective voices which speak for the farmer.

Already, agriculture commissioners from 11 Midwest and Plains states have gathered in Denver in order to determine what requests should be made of Agriculture Secretary-designate Bob Bergland. Among them was Texas Agriculture Commissioner John White.

The meeting, however, turned out to be a political exercise in futility as the eleven state leaders agreed that agriculture is in "dire straits" but could not agree on specific immediate recommendations.

At the core of the meeting was a vote to request Bergland to raise wheat price support loans from the present disastrous level to one 50-cents higher and closer to cost of production. But six of the commissioners, including White, voted against requesting a modest $3 per bushel level.

"The biggest mistake of that meeting to being with is the fact that politicians and political appointees have no business deciding what is best for the farmer," said Jay Naman, president of the Texas Farmers Union.

"Most of the state commissioners are so far removed from the working farmer, that there is no way for them to know the economic reality

"It is rather the place of a well-respected group of farmers themselves who work from a grass-roots level of communication with their neighbors to send policymaking messages to the lawmakers and not a politician-to-politician system."

Such a message to the new administration will in fact be formulated when the Texas Farmers Union convenes its annual state-wide convention in Amarillo, January 21-22. During that time, the organization of almost 10,000 family farmers will officially adopt its 1977 policy, the result of several months of work from county level to a policy drafting committee and finally to the entire body of delegates.

It is that policy which will be placed on the desks of congressmen, legislators, administrators, and all other agriculture policymakers.

Several of those congressmen and legislators will attend the TFU convention, among them Senator John Tower, Congressman Jack Hightower, Texas Senator Max Sherman, and others.

"The Texas Farms Union takes great pride in its history of protecting the family farmer," says Naman. "Our 1977 policy will be a complete and comprehensive statement on behalf of farmers concerning almost all farming and rural matters. Its adoption lies at the heart of what we think will be our biggest and best convention in this most important year for agriculture."

New Phone Directories In Mail

Cameron telephone customers are getting a new directory beginning Thursday, January 6.

Dennis Richter, manager for Southwestern Bell, said delivery of the 1977 directory should be completed by January 15.

"The cover of the new directory was painted by Texas Hill County artist Warren Martin of Ingram," Richter said. The painting, titled 'Royal Family,' depicts the majestic beauty surrounding the birth of a golden eagle.

Martin, who was born in San Antonio in 1932, grew up on the N. J. Hans ranch at the head of the Guadalupe and Sabinal rivers.

Richter said the artist has had numerous shows in Texas, Arizona, and New Mexico since his first show in a roadside diner near San Antonio in 1962. Martin has held one-man shows at Central Park Gallery in San Antonio, David Studios of Arizona, Fort Huachuca Historical Society in Arizona, Kendall Memorial Gallery in San Angelo, and Guadalupe Galleries in Kerrville.

Richter said this year's distribution of some 2,600 directories will be affected by the current nationwide paper shortage. "This year, most residential subscribers with more than one telephone will receive one directory. Business customers will receive their directories according to individual usage and demand."

Customers needing more directories may call the telephone business office after January 15, when initial delivery is completed.

MILAM AREA PARADE OF SPORTS & EVENTS

WITH WHITEWALL RADIAL PAWS--This fine looking machine, a 4-month-old African lion named Ju-Ju, was part of a trade-in deal on a race car at Wells Auto, Rockdale, and owner Rickey Wells, above, has his hands full whenever the new acquisition gets a little playful. Wells said he got the lion from Joe McNamara of Belton who also acquired Ju-Ju in a trade. The big cat is tame, Wells said, loves to play and dines on cooked, not raw, meat. Wells said he isn't sure what he plans to do with the lion who will be around 600 pounds when fully grown. Rockdale Reporter Photo.

No Cure Yet For Common Cold

People get an average of three colds per year and spend more than $735 million trying to find relief, a federal report shows. Yet none of the 35,000-50,000 cold and cough preparations on the market actually can cure the common cold.

The Texas Medical Association (TMA) says a doctor cannot cure common colds and should be called mainly if there is a fever over 101 degrees for more than 24 hours, bloody discharge from nose or mouth, persistent chest pains, earache, severe or long-lasting sore throat or persistent cough.

A doctor also should be contacted if a normally healthy person has a cold for more than a week or two. Of course people with other illnesses may need medical attention if they even get the sniffles since colds can complicate other illnesses.

The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) is working on a program to allow more cold and cough drugs to be sold without prescriptions and strengthen some ingredients already in over-the-counter drugs. Doing so may increase some of these drugs' abilities to relieve cold symptoms. However, people must be increasingly careful not to misuse these products.

The Texas Pharmaceutical Association says many cold medications can cause dizziness, drowsiness, hazy thinking, and other side effects, especially if combined with alcoholic beverages. Allergies to certain drugs also cause reactions.

People allergic to aspirin should be especially careful to read labels since many products contain the drug. In fact, reading labels and following directions is vitally important for all drugs.

Non-prescription drugs also can cause bad reactions, if they interfere with prescription drugs. Advice should be sought about using both types of drugs together. People with heart disease, high blood pressure, thyroid disease, diabetes, glaucoma and several other conditions also need advice on non-prescription drugs.

Almost all drugs can be harmful if over-used but nose sprays and drops present particular problems. The drugs can cause nasal congestion, the same problem they are designed to relieve, TMA says. Nasal membranes malfunction and swell when they are continuously chemically activated.

People get "hooked" on the sprays and may have sinus headaches, loss of smell and taste, or high blood pressure as well as nasal problems. Many individuals have no lasting complications after they quit using the drugs for a few days.

3 Alcoas Retiring From RW

With nearly 75 years combined service, William Brown, Milton Curtis, and John Jackson have retired at Aluminum Company of America's Rockdale Works.

Brown, the senior member of the group with over 24 years, joined Alcoa as a spot-room trainee during plant construction in 1952. In 1970, he became an equipment operator at the Works' atomizer plant, the post held at retirement. He and his wife, Minnie Dea, have two daughters, Naomi Ruth and Rebecca Lynn, and one son, William Douglas. The Browns reside in Rockdale.

Curtis, a Rockdale resident, joined the company's utility department in 1953 as a production helper. In 1956, he moved to the potrooms as a head tapper carbon changer. Thirteen years later he was promoted to a crane operator. He and his wife, Grace, have two daughters, Susan and Sally, and two sons, Pat and Tim. The Curtises are members of the Methodist Church.

Jackson, a native of Thordale, joined Alcoa in 1953. In 1963, he was promoted to crane operator in the carbon plant. He and his wife, Mettie Mae, have three daughters, Willie Doris, Ruth, and Mary Louise, and three sons, Donald, Rodney, and John Henry.

Aluminum Cans Now Worth More

Aluminum Company of America said that effective Tuesday, January 4, it has raised the price it pays for discarded all-aluminum beverage cans from 15 cents to 17 cents a pound, an increase of nearly nine percent.

The used beer and carbonated beverage containers are collected and recycled by Alcoa, thus conserving raw materials and saving 95 percent of the energy required to produce new aluminum from bauxite. This year, Alcoa salvaged more than 1.6 billion containers, thereby retrieving 70 million pounds of metal while paying $10.5 million to individuals who returned the cans for redemption.

Currently, redemption centers in the United States are receiving 26 percent of used all-aluminum containers, or 26 of every 100 beverage containers sold.

A dog's food should never be served hot or chilled.

MADRID

The red carnations of Spain's main socialist party seem to be turning pink. A flexible, moderate line has emerged from a four-day party congress here, the first the Spanish Socialist Workers Party has been allowed to hold in Spain since the 1936-39 civil war. Torn between its principles and political tactics, it has opted to negotiate with the government on free elections for a two-house parliament next spring.

NEW DELHI

A tiny southern Indian tribe is facing extinction because members refuse to marry outside the clan. Doctors are trying to persuade the Kotas, who live in the jungle-clad Nilgiri Hills, to marry outside their 1,200-strong community. The doctors believe inbreeding is threatening the tribe's chances of survival. The chieftain has said he would rather see the tribe perish than have growth by cross-breeding.

MIRITITUBA, BRAZIL

What is Brazil's vaunted Transamazon Highway? If an astronaut on the moon, according to official propaganda, took a photograph of the earth, the negative would show a scratch across South America where the government's 3,500 mile long plan to link the Atlantic Ocean with the Peruvian border scores the Amazon jungle. But to those with their feet on the ground, it is dust and mud when it rains.

BEIRUT

The Palestine Liberation Organization has reached a turning point in its 13-year history, with majority opinion in favor of a Palestinian mini-state alongside Israel. Its military strength sapped by 19 months of war in Lebanon, its political muscle weakened by a new alignment of forces in the Arab world, the PLO has begun a painful reappraisal of a policy which once implicitly called for the destruction of Israel.

CHICAGO

The bombers of the FALM have proved as elusive as their goal--independence for Puerto Rico. The terrorist organization claims credit or is blamed for more than a dozen bomb attacks in New York, Chicago, and Washington over the past two years. Four persons have been killed and scores injured in more than 30 separate explosions, and none of the bombers have ever been caught.

VAIL, COLORADO

When a group of Ute Indians did a snow dance on Vail Mountain, it looked little more than an off-beat news story. But snow, or the lack of it, is a serious matter to those who run the multi-billion dollar, ever-expanding ski industry. At Colorado's 35 resorts, skiing has been growing at an annual rate of 15 percent for several years, but this winter has not been too good because of poor snow conditions.

BASRAH, IRAQ

Iraq has defeated the problem of port congestion, one of the major headaches in harbors throughout the Middle East, according to the head of the ports administration here. Since mid-September, Basrah and the new port of Umm Dasr have kept no ships waiting at all. Two years ago there were queues of up to 90 ships, which had to wait for as long as 100 days to unload.

VIENNA

The United Nations body charged with helping the Third World to industrialize is itself running on a shoe-string budget. The Vienna-based United Nations Industrial Development Organization started its second decade on Jan. 1. It has the highest of aims and the slenderest resources. The United Nations has concentrated on agriculture and there now exists a one billion dollar fund to help farmers in developing countries. There is no such fund for industry.

LONDON

This summer at the height of Britain's worst ever drought, London was testing measures against the biggest threat to the city since the blitz--flooding. Each year, tides on the River Thames get higher. Experts say that freak weather conditions over the North Sea could one day send a surge of water pouring into the homes of over a million Britons. London is sinking into its bed of clay while Scotland is getting higher.

BRAZZAVILLE

More than 200,000 adults have learned to read and write in the People's Republic of the Congo in the past decade as a result of a government campaign against illiteracy, according to officials. Some 235,000 of this central African country's 1,320,000 inhabitants still cannot read or write, but the government hopes illiteracy will have disappeared completely from the Congo in 10 years time.

steps to better living COMPUTERS THAT COOK UP DYE RECIPES

Digital watches that instantly tell the time, day and month...electronic calculators built into ball-point pens...these are only two of the thousands of recent computer innovations.

The Dyestuffs and Chemicals Division of CIBA-GEIGY Corporation, a leading dye-stuffs supplier to the textile industry, has probably developed one of the most dramatic industrial applications for the computer to date—a system to "cook up" dye recipes for color matching fabrics.

The computerized system, which has replaced some manual lab techniques more than a century old, is not only more accurate but saves textile manufacturers enormous amounts of time and money.

Color values or reflectance characteristics of a sample shade to be matched are compared against similar color data on individual dyes previously stored in the computer. From this analysis, the computer can then evaluate—in just an hour's time—over 50,000 dye combinations. From these, the computer automatically selects the six best recipes to suit the customer's requirements. These may be further refined to provide the best matches under all light conditions—daylight, fluorescent or incandescent—for customer fastness needs, or economy in dye cost.

Assisting the textile industry is just one way the scientists at CIBA-GEIGY Corporation help make life better and more pleasant. They also create and manufacture a wide variety of pharmaceuticals, plastics and additives, specialty chemicals, agricultural and consumer products.

UNFOUNDED Fears

People were once so afraid of that newfangled machine called the automobile that in England they limited its speed to four mph and required someone to walk in front of it with a red flag.

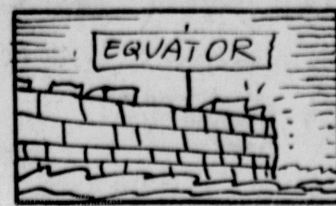

People in Thailand were so afraid of touching their leaders with iron that in 1800 the court jester was forced to perform pranks until an abcess on the king's lip burst. Doctors had refused to break it with a metal instrument!
